Something Is Different On the Streets of Hanoi Ambitious Reinvigoration Attempt Brings Vietnamese Type of Glasnost

By Keith B. Richburg Washington Post Service HANOI — The sights and sounds of what people here refer to as Vietnam's version of glamost are surfacing in this Communist capital and the surrounding countryside.

. In moves likened to the openness campaign of the Soviet leader, Mikhail S. Gorbachev, Hanoi's new leaders have embacked on an ambitious effort to reinvigorate a country hurt by economic decline and politi-cal malaise.

In the process, they hope to reverse more than four decades of an entrenched war mentality, marked by secretiveness, suspicion of outsiders and fear of openly expressing criticism.
The effort, led by the party general secretary, Nguyen Van Linh, has included the liberalization of the country's economy and its political debate, as well as a greater tolerance for Western ideas and fads.

After a meeting of the National Assembly last month, for example, Western journalists were permitted to do something that is extraordinary in Victnam: conduct man-ou-thestreet interviews to determine public reaction to the choice of a new president and a new

Mr. Linh — like Mr. Gorbachev in Moscow - has come to personify the drive for reform. At 71, he has been cutting a more modern — and more human - profile lately, posing for photographs while swinging in a backyard hammock and doing his morning exercise.

These first impressions of Victnam as a country in transition emerged during a two-week visit to Hanoi, Ho Chi Minh City and surrounding provinces. The trip was agreed to in line with the country's decision to allow more visits by Western journalists.

Journalists and scholars who have visited Vietnam regularly since 1975 agree that it is a different place today than it was even a year ago.

Many frequent visitors said government and party officials are increasingly accessible and appear to be much more candid about their past mistakes, especially in managing the econo-

Major Element Of North's Story Is Contradicted By McFarlane

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches WASHINGTON - Robert C. McFarlane, a former national security adviser, contradicted on Tuesday testimony by Lieutenant Colonel Oliver L. North that Colonel North's superiors had been kept fully informed of his activities in the Iran-contra affair.

Mr. McFarlane spoke just after Colonel North ended his testimony before the select House and Senate committees investigating the affair, coming under criticism from the committee leadership.

Colonel North, a former National Security Council aide, repeatedly told the committee that every act he committed in selling arms to Iran and diverting profits for the anti-Sandinist rebels in Nicaragua had been approved by his superiors, either Mr. McFarlane or Mr. McFarlane's successor. Vice Admiral John M. Poindexter.

Unraveling a Legacy of Mathematics Decades Later, Indian Clerk's Genius Dazzles Theorists

By James Gleick New York Times Service

NEW YORK - In some ways, mathematicians are finally beginning to penetrate the mind of Srimivasa Ramanuian.

One hundred years have passed since Ramanujan (rah-MAH-nuh-jun) was born in the small city of Kumbakonam in southern India. When he died, 32 years later, he left a strange, raw legacy: about 4,000 formulas written in three notebooks and on some Some of the power and originality of Ramanujan's mathematics was understood a few years before his death. His contemporaries saw from the theorems scrawled across his pages that he possessed a genius for calculating the hidden laws and relationships that govern the wilderness of numbers. But Ramanujan was uneducated in standard mathematics and isolated by geography for most of his productive life. Often his formulas seemed as obscure as they were elegant. He worked in a place and a way of his own, drawing his formulas and theorems from a mental landscape far from the frontier of mathematics as seen in his day. Now his work is flowing into mathematics and science more deeply than could have been imagined a generation ago. Computers with special programs to manipulate algebraic quantities have made it possible for more ordinary mathematicians to pick up the trail of his thought. And modern physics, from the "superstring theory" of cosmology to the statistical mechanics of complicated molecular systems, finds itself turning more and more to the pure findings of number theory and complex analysis - the worlds of Ramanujan. As researchers pore over the rough pages, trying to understand the formulas and prove them and learn more of why Ramanujan chose certain paths, they sense a foundation that has not yet been revealed. "When he pulled extraordinary objects out of the air, they weren't just curiosities but they were the right things," said Jonathan M. Borwein of Dalhousie University, in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

"They are clusive evidence of a theory that's lurking around somewhere that he never made explicit," said Mr. Borwein, one of many mathematicians who have lately focused on Ramanujan's formulas.

The trail is hard to follow. Using a slate, Ramanujan jotted down formulas, erased them with his elbow, jotted down more, and then recorded a result in a notebook only when it had reached final form. The intermediate results — the links of the chain are lost. Unlike mainstream mathematicians, he felt no need to prove that a result was true. His legacy is simply a set of discoveries. "He seems to have functioned in a way unlike anybody else we know of," Mr. Borwein said. "He had such a feel for things that they just flowed out of his

A Delta Air Lines jumbo jet involved in a near collision over the Atlantic last week later wandered into the path of another aircraft during the same flight, Canadian air safety officials said Tuesday.

In what an industry official called "an incredible string of bad luck," the airline also suffered two equipment failures on Sunday and a Delta plane landed on the wrong rimway at Boston. The company declined comment on the incidents over the Atlantic because an investigation is still be-

House Narrowly Backs Smoking Ban On Most Flights but Bill Faces Hurdles

WASHINGTON - The House of Representatives has voted to ban smoking on all demestic airline flights of two hours or less.

The ban, approved Monday night, 198-193, was contained in an amendment to an $11 billion transportation appropriations bill form

The ban would affect 80 percent of all U.S. airline flights, according to the Federal Aviation Administration.

However, the amendment must still be adopted by the Senate where it will face opposition from several powerful lobbies. In

The business of being an expert trial witness is growing ex-plosively. The New York Times reports. People with expertise on such subjects as bicycle mishaps, bottle or battery explosions, hot-air balloon crashes or radiation accidents have joined tens of thousands of doctors, university professors and engineers in the expert witness industry. Their rates range from $50 an hour for a law enforcement expert to more than $10,000 a day for a plastic sur-

"A lot of people are making themselves available for this kind of work," said Gary E. Melickian, a partner in the Ex-pert Witness Network, a Washington clearinghouse that provides lawyers with the names of experts who are willing to testify in court.

The Technical Advisory Service for Attorneys in Fort Washington, Pennsylvania, was established in 1961 and reports an annual growth rate of about 15 percent. It lists about 10,000 experts in 4,000 categories. Law journals are carrying five times as many entries for expert wit-nesses today as in 1970.

The demand has increased along with the number of civil lawsuits, the size of jury awards and the role of technical information in such suits. But legal scholars and judges are measy about the influence and cost of expert witnesses. Several legislative decisions and court rulings in the past year have tightened restrictions on employing

Helms's Favorite Gang

A Texas murse named Kindra Bryan, who had gone to Mozambique to do relief work, was abducted by rebels in May. Senator Jesse Heims, a champion of Renamo, the Mozambican rebel group, took the occasion to press his campaign to induce the State Department to take up the Renamo cause.

Call the Howard University professor who is Renamo's local representative, Senator Heims told a State Department official on June 24, and "you'll get your hostage re-leased in five minutes." Three days later, the department's Mozambique desk officer reached the professor, Luis Serapiao. Yet Kindra Bryan remains a Renamo prisoner.

More is at stake than Mr. Helms's embarrassment at the hands of a group that enjoys his political favor. For almost a year, he has been conducting an "abduction" of another sort, holding up the confirmation of a veteran diplomat. Melissa Wells, as President Reagan's ambassador to Mozambique. His purpose is to defy the official policy of attempting to pry Mozambique from its ear-lier embrace of Marxist philosophy and Sovi-et alliance. For Mr. Helms it is enough that Renamo is anti-Communist. "Until you treat all freedom fighters in the world the same," he told the State Department, "you're going to have problems with me."

Since the U.S. government aids Jonas Savimbi's UNITA guerrillas in Angola, the question is asked, why not also aid Renamo in Mozambique? It is a fair point. In fact, it is a mistake to go with the guerrillas, and thereby become a partner of South Africa, in either place. In Angola, the presence of Cuban troops defending the government eventually overcame the administration's initial unwillingness to make common cause with Pretoria. In Mozambique, the absence of a Cuban factor has let Mr. Reagan keep his distance from Renamo, But his policy, though firmly supported in the State Department, is under pressure from conservative elements not just in Congress but in other executive departments. They present the recent working-level State contact with Renamo's representative in Washington as a harbinger of sweeping policy change.

Washington has worked to offer the Mozambican government more security and more development than it could expect from Moscow. The results are measurable and constitute one of the few successes for the policy known as constructive engagement. Senator Helms would throw this away by having the United States switch horses and back his favorite gang of kidnappers.

North on the Ticket?

candidates stand on Oliver North? The television anchorman Dan Rather said that he had telegrams promoting a Jack Kemp-Oliver North ticket, and Senator Bob Dole asked at the recent Young Republicans conference in Seattle — "jokingly," a spokesman insists — "What would you think of a Dole-North ticket?" The audience, full of enthusiasm for the colonel, cheered, and most of the Republican candidates have been similarly upbeat about Lieutenant Colonel North. But we note that all references to Colonel North on the national ticket still put him in the second spot.

Vice President George Bush, because of his work on anti-terrorism policy, seems to have had closer contact with Oliver North than any of the other Republicans. He called Colonel North when the colonel was fired Nov. 25 and "wished him well," but said that he and Admiral John Poindexter should have waived the Fifth Amendment and testified before the intelligence committees. Just be-fore the North testimony began, however, he insisted that "North is going to come out far better than some of his severest critics."

Mr. Bush's enthusiasm is exceeded, it appears, by some of his competitors'. Representative Kemp, who was eagerly defending the president when the Iran-contra story broke in November, now feels that the North testimony provides stronger support for the president and the Nicaraguan contras than they have received for years - an inferential other contra aid supporters, including Mr. Kemp himself. Paul Laxalt sees Colonel North as, in Mr. Reagan's words, "a national hero," a man who has risked his life for his country and who has provided the clearest articulation of the contra aid policy. The Reverend Pat Robertson, who was once briefed by Colonel North, phoned him after he was fired and told him he had gotten "s raw deal." As for "that little arms caper," Mr. Robertson said on his 700 Club television broadcast last winter, "North wouldn't have done anything except under orders."

Standing back and taking a more cautious stand have been Bob Dole and Pierre du Pont. As Senate Republican leader, Mr. Dole was instrumental in setting up the special Senate committee and in choosing its mem-bers. Earlier this month he described Colonel North as "a loose cannon," but, mixing the metaphor, predicted "no smoking gun." Mr. du Pont, a vehement supporter of aid for the contras, said last week that Colonel North did what he felt was right and [helping the contras] is a policy I agree with." But the former Delaware governor added that if Colonel North broke the law, "he will be brought before the system of justice," and said he reserves judgment until all the testimony is in - a suitable note of caution amid the jaunty enthusiasm that risks overlooking the serious mistakes Colonel North has been convicted by his own testimony of making. -THE WASHINGTON POST.

Paying for AIDS Care

is whether society will do so with higher previous year's health costs. alth insurance premiums or, via Medic the better way is insurance.

This issue differs markedly from AIDS and life insurance. Life insurers cannot regularly adjust premiums, and have been abused Massachusetts to test for the AIDS virus.

Health insurers deserve less sympathy when they insist on the right to test applicants and to deny coverage to those infected with the AIDS virus. AIDS patients without health insurance must first exhaust their savings, so that as paupers they can qualify for Medicaid, the government's medical program for the poor. The more humane course is to bar health insurers from testing for the AIDS virus.

Some health insurers warn that the projected cost of the AIDS epidemic will destroy their business. They cite a basic principle of insurance: People at equal risk should pay equal premiums. Carriers of the AIDS virus, being at higher risk, should not be subsidized by others. Bank clerks and trapeze artists do not belong in the same pool.

A second principle, say insurers, is that insurance cannot be bought against an event that has already become likely. A house in the path of a forest fire cannot be insured; neither should a person already infected with the AIDS virus.

These are compelling arguments - in theory. In practice, most health insurance customers are not screened or tested, even though increasingly refined modern tests could identify many different risks. Insurers do not bother to make these distinctions cast out to bear their burden alone. because most people are insured, through

New York's nonprofit insurer, offers individnal health insurance, without testing, to all who apply. This year it expects to pay $80 million for AIDS, less than I percent of its total payout of $10 billion. Private insurers who complain about AIDS, says a Blue Cross spokesman, are crying wolf.

But the wolf is real, say the private insurers, or soon will be, with the total health insurance costs of AIDS expected to reach $10 billion a year by 1991. Maybe, but if that is more than they can handle, their actuaries could file requests for rate increases with state insurance departments. So far none have. New York's department has now rightly joined California in denying use of the AIDS antibody test as a screen for health insurance. The cost of AIDS could become less manageable for insurers if, for example, many employers should start to self-insure or somehow exclude AIDS virus carriers. But the insurers' fear of imminent ruin is overstated. In some states they are already forbidden to test for diseases that affect only certain groups, like sickle-cell anemia and Tay-Sachs. Insurance is about sharing risk. The cost of AIDS is not so heavy that its victims need be made scapegoats and

On Missiles

M OSCOW —Although the Sovi-et Union and the United States have come close to reaching an agreement to eliminate intermediate- and shorter-range missiles in Europe, there are still obstacles to signing such an accord soon.

The talks seemingly gained new momentum in April after the Soviet Union addressed the issues that the U.S. side had asserted were hampering an agreement. But now the momentum is in jeopardy because of new destructive conditions that the American side is trying to insert into the guidelines reached at Revkiavik.

the guidelines reached at Reylcjavik.

One serious stumbling block is the U.S. insistence on the right to convert Pershing-2 missiles into shorter-range Pershing-1Bs rather than eliminate them. This could give the Americans a pretent to claim they were eliminating medium-range missiles in Europe. But the reverse process would be just as simple. Pershing-1Bs can be easily turned back into Pershing-2s within two days.

Nor does the United States want to

Nor does the United States want to destroy its medium-range cruise mis-siles in Europe. The Americans suggest now that the problem can be solved by removing their warheads or by transferring those missiles to battleships near Europe. But that would make a phantom of the agreement to rid Europe of medium-range missiles

Another important issue is the standing U.S. proposal that the Soviet Union should reduce and dismantle its missiles unilaterally while the United States monitors us. At the same time, the U.S. arsenal would remain intact. and our inspectors would not be allowed on American bases.

If any U.S. warheads are left in Europe under any pretext, it could

The talks could lead to a new summit meeting, if America has the will.

hardly be called a "true zero" level. I am sure Washington would make the same argument if Moscow decided to store some warheads in an East European country for its own or another country's missiles. Thus, the American insistence on keeping 72 U.S. war-heads for use on West German missiles poses a serious problem. In addition, Washington's draft agreement allows the development of new types of intermediate-range ra-clear weapons, but only for the United States, while forbidding the develop-ment of a ground-launched cruise missile for us. The Americans want to deploy their remaining Pershing-2 missiles in Alaska, thus increasing the nuclear threat to Soviet territory without allowing a reciprocal threat.

be deployed west of the 80th meridian in the Eastern Hemisphere, thereby preventing the missiles from reaching Western Europe. Our medium-range missiles would also not be able to reach U.S. territory. So why does the United States insist on deploying Pershing-2s in Alaska?

Reports about future American and allied programs to modernize and build up nuclear arms stocks make us apprehensive. Under the guise of preserving the U.S. "nuclear marantees" to Western Europe, the United States is planning to increase the number of submarine-launched cruise missiles, to deploy more bomb-ers and atomic artillery and to enhance the range of Lance missiles.
The North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies are trying to undermine the possible agreement in another way — through an endless chain of linkages. After we removed the issue of shorter-range missiles, they started to talk about tactical and battlefield nuclear weapons, then even about conventional arms and troops.

The response of Warsaw Pact nations to those linkages has been known for a long time: All existing asymmetries should be dealt with decisively through reductions by the side that is ahead to establish equal, low levels of troops and arms. Those levels should be sufficient for defense but should exclude any possibility to conduct offensive operations. Such issues, together with remaining tactical nuclear weapons, could be considcred at separate multilateral talks.

From the Soviet perspective, all intermediate-range missiles in Enrope should be eliminated.

We are ready for a "global zero" option—the elimination of all U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range weapons - provided that American nuclear weapons in the Far East are taken into account, including those in Japan, the Philippines and South Korea, and that the U.S. carrier-based force in the Pacific be removed beyond certain agreed on boundaries. The possibility for elimination of intermediate-range weapons is ripe, and we do not want to miss this chance. Why postpone it until the next U.S. administration comes to office? Nobody can guarantee that a similar opportunity will arise again.

We are convinced that the agreement on elimination of intermediaterange nuclear forces in Europe, together with an agreement on key elements of a 50 percent reduction of strategic nuclear weapons and a ban on space weapons, could provide a solid basis for a future U.S.-Soviet summit meeting. But what is needed first is a businesslike, positive American attitude toward the Geneva talks.

Our impression is that our negotiating partner cannot decide what is the proper course. The remaining obstacles can be easily overcome once come the fact that Frenchmen were worrying about Germany. After all, the fear that the neigh-bor across the Rhine might shift toward neutralcion of yesterday is being replaced by destructive suspicion: Mr. Jobert's advice amounts to noth-ing less than a warning for France (and others) to ism, however unjustified, at least prompted greater readiness in Paris to work more closely with Bonn.

In the early 1980s, when West Germany was shaken by the vehement debate over Euromissiles, France us residual Ganillist inhibitions and sought to strengthen West Germany with the West Germany binks with the West Character of those shifty Germans.

It is, to put it undiplomatically, a phosy argument, in fact and in thought. If Mr. Jobert, as he claims, really has been reading German newspacements residual Ganillist inhibitions and sought to strengthen West Germany's links with the West Germany. views from the ones he claims to have uncovered. Far from clamoring for reunification or moving away from the West in pursuit of a nebulous national unity, West German editorial writers and politicians have emphasized, practically in unison, that the democratic freedom of West Germany is much more important than national unity for all Germans. The only truly neutralist party in the finances was regarded as more important than conspectrum of West German politics, the Green party, has stood out by advocating that Bonn formally renounce any notion of reunification and change the constitution accordingly.

The problem is not the fantasy of a West German The problem is not the fantasy of a West German swing to the East. It is that, if nothing is done to move West European political unity forward, the Western framework in which West Germany has found its place will gradually but strely disintegrate—to the detriment of West Germany above all, but also of the rest of Europe.

What is worrying is Euro-langue, both in Bonn and Paris. There is too little realization in Bonn that

West Germany, in order to ensure its security and prosperity, must invest in the political future of Western Europe. True, all the major parties in Boan declare themsalves devoted to West European unity. But when it comes to the crunch, the farm vote or the next local elections are always more important than the future of Europe. In this respect, too, West Germany has become a normal country. There is also mertis in France. French politicians are busily preparing for next year's presidential elections. They have little time, and even less vision, to build the future political framework for Europe. Yet Prance has always been the country best equipped to launch a European initiative Now it lacks both the will and the perspective. Instead, if Mr. Jobert's arguments are any guide, it may even be tempted to make a virtue of inadequacy by pretending that inertia, far from being a mistake, is the best policy. For it permits France to remain true to her Gaullist calling, and free of any entanglement with the military integration of NATO or the neighbor to the east.

If such thinking should become respectable in Paris, the danger is not that Germany will, as Mr. Jobert puts it, "go its own way in Mitteleuropa." There is no such desire in West Germany today. Rather the rick has elemented. nere is no such desire in west Commany today.
Rather, the risk lies elsewhere: West Germany, in a decaying Europe, will be a state adult, not by choice but by circumstance.

To remain anchored to the West, we German will, of course, have to make efforts of our own. But we will also need the support of our friends. The only condition under which Mr. Jobert's fantasy might become self-fulfilling is if the governments to which he appeals should share his suspicions and follow his shortsighted advice.

Gulf: An Unlikely Pair Comes Knocking at the UN

WASHINGTON — Beneath the Reagan administration's plan to take Kuwaiti tankers under American wing a broader, more political and more positive Gulf policy is struggling to get out. The interesting and ironic thing about it is that an dministration described in both friendly and critical rhetoric as determined to assert American power on its own is moving to a policy based increasingly on working through and with the United Nations.

through closer cooperation, even on nuclear matters and defense. The most obvious fruit of that period will be the joint maneuvers this fall in Bavaria of the French Force d'Action Rapide and German forces.

Even the more suspicions Frenchmen, however, subsequently discovered that there never had been a real threat of West German neutralism. When the

Bonn parliament in November 1983 voted to deploy

the Pershing-2 and the cruise missile on West Ger-to business as usual. In Paris, attention turned to the coming elections, and in Bonn, consolidating public much oratory but little progress has been registered in the relationship between the two countries.

But the old, fashionable fear of Germany drift-

Gaullist religion. At least this is the message that Michel Jobert, the former French foreign minis-ter, conveyed in an article published in the Inter-

This comes about not simply through the frustration of American initiatives but, in the first instance, through an unusual overlap of short-term Soviet and American interests. The two superpowers are ready to temper their fundamental rivalry for Third World regional influence to a point to achieve their separate ends: to calm the Gulf, to hold or rebuild a relationship with both Iran and Iraq, and in particular to ensure that a rampant fundamentalist Iran does not win the war:

Why, then does Mikhail Gorbachev not proceed with a second-Tashkent? Because the Soviet reach is not all that great and because the Kremlin wants to defuse the current crisis lest the United States use it to achieve "long-harbored plans" of building up its military presence in a region on the Soviet doorstep. B EAVER ISLAND, Michigan — Ollie North was not Topic A here on this blessed isle, but he finished a respectable third. The unusually warm, muggy weather and the absence of the normal frostbite symptoms among those who swam in the general-ly arctic waters here atop Lake Michigan were more discussed at Pat and Josh's wedding dance.
But Colonel North did penetrate the cocoon of indifference in which the relaxed folks here usually wrap themselves to keep outside affairs from upsetting their revels. He did well, too. A lady who lives next to the parish hall, and is thus attuned to the crosscurrents of opinion in the thriving metropolis of St. James, said that so far as she could judge, the people here "would like to elect Ollie president, just as soon as he's out of jail."

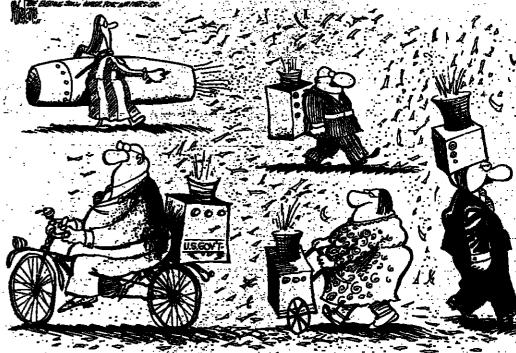

The comment was made without a hint of irony. And her explanation was equally straightforward: "We expect people in Washington to he to us. At least, he tells you when he is lying and when he isn't."

mood as sour as that of the 70s. In the past year, there has been a resurgence of the cynicism and negativism that marked the decade of Watergate, the oil embargo and inflation. In a less jaded climate, a fellow like Colonel North would never strike such a respousive chord. As it is, he has scored a public relations coup by presenting, in diluted fashion, a blend of the virthes people thought they had found in the last two presidents—only to con-clude they had been fooled.

Jimmy Carter emerged from ob-scurity to win the White House in 1976 with a thousand speeches promising he would "never lie or mislead you." He broke people's hearts; not because he deliberately broke faith. but because there were so many issues of governance on which he simply did not know what he believed.

WASHINGTON — A quiz: Who is a particularly burn rap because, whatever the author of the "Democracy in its other errors (now being broadcast live south Korea And 1 100700 Western Translation). Research foreign South Korea Act of 1987? Roh Tae on national television), Reagan foreign Woo, charman of the ruling party in policy under Mr. Shultz has taken the South Korea, who dramatically acceded notion of democratization very seriously. to virtually all popular demands for democracy? President Chun Doo Hwan, who backed up Mr. Roh and has promised a democratic transition?

No. the "Democracy in South Korea (Kennedy, Kerry, Harkin and Mikulski) who, on June 18, in the midst of the South Korean riots, introduced a bill to bring the blessings of democracy to South Korea by means of a range of American economic sanctions.

The legislation was stillborn. It was never passed, and by the time it would have gone into effect, the dictatorship had already pledged to dismantle itself. But the bill remains: a curiosity, a historical artifact of Democratic liberalism circa 1987. And for future legislative archaeologists, it illustrates perfectly three of its enduring characteristics:

First, a touching and grandiose belief (consider only the name, the "Democracy in South Korea Act") in the power of the United States to redeem the politics of benighted lands by means of well-intended resolutions of Congress. Second, an unerring resort to a single instrument economic sanctions - as the solution to foreign-policy conundrums. And third, a very mean-edged partisan style.

When Senator Edward Kennedy introduced his bill, he denounced the administration's "contempt for the struggle for democracy in other lands," adding "We have learned to our regret in Congress that quiet diplomacy in this administration means no diplomacy."
Within 12 days, Mr. Kennedy had to eat his words. Quiet diplomacy had now turned into "effective diplomacy" which, Mr. Kennedy was forced to con-cede on June 30, had helped bring about the near-miraculous outcome in Seoul. But Mr. Kennedy's complaints were ill-tempered 12 days earlier, even before events refuted him. "The secretary of state," Mr. Kennedy had charged, "instead of forthrightly calling for steps toward democracy, urges restraint and tilts toward the regime." Wrong on all counts. Secretary George Shultz did call for steps toward democracy. He did not tilt toward the regime. And calling for restraint while riots are taking place in 12 cities is hardly an offense.

Moreover, Mr. Shuitz had called for steps toward democracy long before the student riots provided a backdrop for grandstanding. On Feb. 6, Assistant Secretary of State Gaston Sigur deliv-ered a speech calling for Koreans to begin "permanently 'civilianizing' their politics" (that is, for an end to military rule) and urging a transition to "a more open and legitimate political system."

The contempt-for-democracy charge is sion of the idea, Mr. Shultz has attempted to make the promotion of democracy

The policy is twofold. The Reagan Doctrine pledges American help to those trying to overthrow Communist dictatorships. What has been called the corollary to the Reagan Doctrine pledges American help to those trying to democratize non-Communist, often pro-American dictatorships.

The latter is not a theoretical exercise. In 18 months, the United States has had to move decisively in Haiti, the Philip-pines and South Korea. It is now challenged again in Panama, where the administration finds itself arrayed against the current dictator. For its efforts, the administration has earned a storing of the U.S. Embassy in Panama City and an ostentations tête à tête between Panama's dictator, Manuel Antonio Noriega, and his Nicaraguan counterpart, Daniel Ortega Saavedra. They jointly denounced U.S. interference in the internal affairs of Central American countries.

Interfering in others' internal affairs to promote democracy is not an easy sell domestically, either. On the one hand, some conservatives argue that a zeal for countries. The answer is simple: You do not blindly threaten or weaken regimes where there exists no democratic alter-

Where Luck Ends, We Need Government

WASHINGTON — A staple of the stories written by Horatio Alger is sheer, wonderful luck. Our Hero stops a runaway horse and carriage. The frightened and, of course, grateful, tary school. In fact, more than 100 classes passenger happens to be the beautiful of mostly poor kids in 15 cities have been daughter of a rich man. Our Hero is on adopted by wealthy individuals. And it his way to material success. He is industrious and brave. But mostly he is to these sudents. Drop-out rates are lowlucky. The passenger could have been er than usual and an assounding number the ugly daughter of a poor man.

That element of luck, undeniably important in anyone's life, is nevertheless in its best and worst sense. For the kids, essentially unfair. On a given day, a child will be born to poor ghetto parents and another will come into the world heir to a fortune. To a modest degree, we count on government to inject some equity into fortune to attend a school adopted by a life's unfair situations. Education is one wealthy person. So some kids have their area where we expect it to do so.

But luck - the sheer luck of birth and, even, of location — now plays an even greater role in a child's chances of getting a good education and, especially, of going to college. Nothing illustrates that better than the exemplary work of Eugene Lang, a millionaire industrialist. Six years ago, he promised a class of New York sixth-graders, all of them poor, that if they could get to college, he would pay for it. Thirty of the original 59 students appear ready to take up his offer. They are college-bound.

Mr. Lang's idea has been copied. Re-cently, a Philadelphia stockbroker and his wife announced they would pay the college tuition of 116 ghetto kids, all of them now in the sixth grade. A Virginia real-estate developer has made a similar offer to students at a Washington elemenof them seem headed for college.

But this is really a Horatio Alger story the key element is luck - the sheer good wealthy person. So some kids have their college fuition paid for while others, maybe a block away, do not.

The Lang approach has been widely, even lavishly, praised. This is an example, we are told, of that most wonderful of all things - private initiative. The praise is not just a reflection of conservative yahooism. Most of the wealthy people who have put up their money for college tuitions have become involved with the schools they adopted and the this who attend them. They counsel, they mediate, they encourage. Nothing takes the place of a person who cares.

But nothing—not even good-hearted millionaires - can substitute for government's obligation to offer what some kids receive by sheer luck. Over the last six years, the Reagan administration has cut the federal higher education budget by about $3 billion. What remains mostly are loans which, for the poor, are often dannting. Outright stipends for poor students, the so-called Pell Grants, are limited to $2,100 a year — hardly sufficient to cover the cost of room and board that often exceeds $10,000 a year. In an era in which the cost of obtaining a higher education has zoomed, the federal budget for it has been cut.

Much has been made recently of competition and productivity. America's ability to compete internationally reflects many factors, but certainly one of them is education. The administration has met this national crisis with words. exhortation and bromides, such as the need to teach values. At the same time, it has attempted to gut the Head Start program for pre-schoolers and has made it harder for all but the affluent to send their kids to college. The most important resource the nation has is the minds of the people. It is renewable. Unlike, say, copper or oil, it cannot be depleted unless it is allowed to be. Tragically, we are allowing it to be. Mr. Lang and other good people have moved to fill a financial void that should not exist in the first place. A student's higher education should not depend on the benevolence of an alumnus or the charitable caprice of a wealthy person who may later turn to other interests or run out of money. Even in an era of limited government, when it comes to education. Horatio Alger stories are not uplifting. They're tragic. The Washington Post.

With the reflagging of Kuwaiti tankers approaching, thus moving the United States closer to a military conflict with Iran, it will be easier to see the obvious: the need for an administration whose foreign policy is under suspicion to be more closely watched than usual.

The president has again acted without the consent of Congress by making his commitment to Kuwait almost a week before disclosing the information ("Miscues and Late Consultation Doomed Gulf Plan in Congress," July 6).

At what point in the cycle of retaliations will public opinion allow for restraint? After a tanker bearing the U.S. flag goes down? Or after a retaliatory attack by Iran on an American patrol ship, with loss of lives? Will we see an American attack on Tehran by a president only too slad to avenge himself on the country that has caused his administration so much humiliation?

'Pure Protectionism'

Regarding "Proposed FAA Rules Worry Foreign Firms" (Special News Report on Aviation, June 15):

Regardless of what the Federal Aviation Administration says, its proposal to forbid non-U.S. companies to maintain and repair U.S.-registered transport aircraft has nothing to do with air safety; it is pure protectionism.

Worldwide - and this includes the United States — there are very good and some not-so-good maintenance and repair organizations. If you read some of the National Transportation Safety Board accident reports that have identified bad maintenance and repair practices as accident causes, you will find that even some of the best U.S. companies had not done their work right. The only fair approach to the problem would be to deal with bad practices on a company-by-company basis, regardless of the country of origin.

The first issue of AIDS Patient Care: A Magazine For Health Professionals is to be published this week by Mary Ann Liebert Inc., a New York publisher.

It will appear six times a year, with 25,000 copies sent free to individuals and organizations involved in the care of patients with acquired immune deficiency syndrome. The basic ad rate is

The company has 39 publications in print or close to it. All deal with health care and two others also have to do with AIDS. About two years ago the company began to publish AIDS Research and Human Retroviruses. Last spring it established the Amfar (American Federation for AIDS Research) Directory,

In a single 30-second television commercial from Levine, Huntley, Schmidt & Beaver, a bearded hippie of the late 1960s proclaims: "Who needs money, man?" A teletyped note that clatters across the bottom of the screen shows him to be today's president of Bio-Tech Lasers with a personal worth of $3 million. A frantic female from a 1970s demonstration is today's headmis-tress of the Little Lady Charm School in Westport, Connecticut. For a parting shot, a neat chap in white shirt and braces turns out to be doing three to five years in prison for insider trading.

Armed with research data from Yankelovich Clancy Shulman, Nicholas H. Niles, the publisher of Changing Times, noted that there was a great change in the American people from the 1970s to the 1980s. In that earlier time, he said, the feeling was: "I can have it all. Money comes easily.

More recently, he said: "People began to lack confidence. They feel that they can't compete with the Japanese, that their children are going to be worse off than they were. There is a change in the population's outlook and the way they deal with things. To feel more secure, what they needed was information.

Changing Times, which recently delebrated its 40th anniversary with a circulation of 1.35 million last year carried 624 pages of advertising, up from 491 in 1985.

IBM Net Off 9.8%, Sales Up

Drop in Quarter Depresses Shares

NEW YORK - International Business Machines Corp. said Tuesday that its earnings had fallen 9.8 percent in the second quarter to $1.178 billion, disappointing inves-tors who knocked more than $2 off its share price.

The decline from $1.305 billion in the corresponding 1986 quarter was the computer giant's fifth straight quarterly drop, confound-ing recent speculation that earnings might improve. On a per-share basis, net earnings fell to $1.95 from $2.12 in the 1986 second quarter, despite a 4.3 percent rise in revenue to $12.80 billion from $12.27 billion.

Some analysts had expected IBM's earnings to be even lower, at $1.85 a share, according to Institutional Brokers Estimate Service, compiled by Lynch, Jones & Ryan. But in recent weeks Wall Street had grown increasingly optimistic about IBM's prospects, especially for its Personal System/2, a new family of personal computers that the company said was selling well. IBM's stock price fell $2,375 to close at $167.50 in heavy trading on the New York Stock Exchange. "People were expecting too much, too soon," said Stephen Smith of PaineWebber.

Despite the earnings decline, some of the gloom that has afflicted IBM since mid-1985 has lifted. Analysts have given the company high marks for regaining lost ground in the personal and minicomputer markets, increasing revenue from software and maintenance services, and keeping costs in line.

Rick Martin of Sanford C. Bernstein & Co. said Wall Street analysts were hoping for a better per-formance. "Everybody had their fingers crossed," he said. But, Mr. Martin added, the generally lackluster second-quarter figures do not foreshadow a poor showing for the remainder of 1987. "We continue to feel the turnsround in earnings will start in the second half," (Resters, AP, UPI)

Harried traders in Singapore provide a visual index of Asia's equity boom

Stock Boom Tests Asian Exchanges Markets Wrestling With Home-Grown Restrictions

By Patrick L. Smith

BANGKOK --- Not much more than a year ago, the only thing that seemed to stir brokers at the Securities Exchange of Thailand was the arrival of a foreign visitor: With no apparent sense of the absurd, they would team up with floor clerks to demonstrate what trading would be like, if only there were any.

Similarly, the Korea Stock Exchange was some-thing of a local joke when it completed a vast, computerized home for itself in the early 1980s. After a few desultory transactions at the open bell, it would have been possible to play volleyball on the trading floor without much interruption. But for these two exchanges and many others in East Asia, things are dramatically different now. In line with a worldwide trend, the region's emerging stock markets have attracted unprecedent amounts of local and overseas capital

Yet the sudden influx of capital has forced every small exchange in the region to confront inadequacies that could either retard growth to some extent or increase the risk of a sudden collapse.

Trading volume, in some cases, has increased as much as fivefold from 1986 levels. Market indexes have risen up to 120 percent in the same period. Exchanges once begging for business are now overflowing. In Kuala Lumpur, for instance, the average daily turnover has risen to about 50 million ringgit ($19.61 million at current exchange rates) from 11 million ringgit in the past year.

Just before opening a larger, partially computerized trading floor two months ago, the Kuala Lumpur Stock Exchange cut half an hour from its daily trading time. "There was just too much activity," said Nik Mohamed Din, the exchange's

In many respects, the blossoming of East Asia's small markets is the fulfillment of an ambition long cherished by government officials in the re-gion, as well as brokers, traders, international fund managers and development experts. Asia's "eco-nomic miracle," they have often argued, has been too often financed by debt rather than equity, leaving corporations throughout the region overborrowed and financial systems underdeveloped.

The desire to reduce a traditional dependence in Asia on commercial bank credits has been especially pronounced over the past several years, as nations such as South Korea, Malaysia, the Philippines and Thailand have reached the prudent limit on their ability to generate the hard currency to repay their loans.

The exchanges themselves are tiny: Taken together they amount to about $130 billion in capitalization, a fraction of the roughly $2.7 trillion each for stock markets in the United States and Japan. Nonetheless, many analysts predict that Asia's junior bourses, along with the more mature Hong Kong exchange, will become global leaders for return on investment.

The International Finance Corp., a World Bank affiliate that has been instrumental in nurturing capital markets in developing countries, predicted

U.S. Retail Sales Rose a Sluggish 0.4% in June

WASHINGTON — U.S. retail difference. sales rose a smaller-than-expected 0.4 percent in June, with virtually all of the increase coming from auto purchases, the Commerce Department said Tuesday. Economic forecasters had expected sales to rise 0.5 percent to 0.7 percent during the month. It was the fourth straight month of virtually unchanged sales. Retail sales have moved less than 0.5 percent up or down since February. Total sales in the first half of this year slipped 0.1 percent from the final six months of 1986, a sign that consumers' free-spending ways have ended and a hint of continued sluggish growth in the economy.

The weak growth is causing fears of recession because consumer spending accounts for about two-thirds of U.S. economic activity. After the June figures were re-leased, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said consumer spending was unlikely to be the major driving force for economic growth this year.

"Total real personal consu

tion spending probably rose" in the April to June quarter after two quarterly declines, he said in Washington. "Consumers should continue to lift their spending modestly, but they will not provide the economy's driving force this year."

The 0.4 percent increase compared with May's revised 0.3 percent drop in sales, originally reported as a 0.6 percent fall.

The June figures also were up 4.5 percent from a year earlier, but sales were well below their record of $129 billion last September. After accounting for seasonal factors, the government estimated that retail sales totaled $125.1 biltion in June, up $531 million from

May. Sales of durable goods, or items made to last three or more years, increased 0.8 percent to account for $48.1 billion of June's total.

Auto dealers enjoyed the most success of that group, with sales rising 1.9 percent to $28.1 billion. That increase came despite a decline in sales of U.S.-made cars from a year earlier. Higher sticker prices or a tendency to buy more

Sales of nondurable goods went up 0.1 percent to total a seasonally adjusted $76.97 billion. Clothing stores posted the only substantial gain, 2.4 percent. Economists have attributed the flat sales reports to reluctance by consumers to purchase such major items as cars and furniture while they carry record high debt levels and personal income is growing weakly. (UPI, AP, Reuters)

At World Bank, Reserves Expected To Eat Up Profit

WASHINGTON — The World Bank's profit this year is likely to be used entirely to bolster reserves against potential losses from Third World loans, bank sources said Tuesday. If that happens, funds may be withheld from the International Development Associa-tion, the bank's concessional lending arm to the poorest nations, which usually receives $100 million to $250 million from the annual profit. The bank's profit, to be announced next week, is roughly $1.05 billion for the year ended une 30, the sources said.

According to one source, pressure to add to reserves relects concern in financial markets over an increase in the reserves have fallen because of the decline of the dollar.

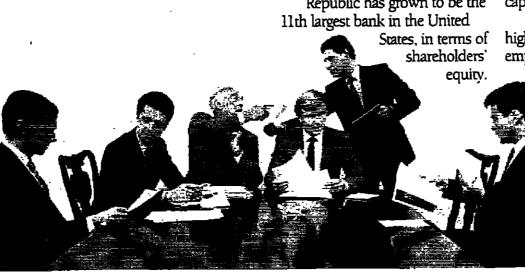

The sources said that some bank directors may argue that a contribution should still be made to IDA. "But management believes the market per-ception must be dealt with first" one source said.

The action would follow recent increases in loan-loss re-serves by leading U.S. and foreign commercial banks.

Discreetly, Bundesbank Makes Dollars Available

FRANKFURT — The Bundesbank made it clear to some West German banks that it is willing to sell them dollars, but this should not be seen primarily as an attempt to cap the dollar at current levels, dealers said Tuesday. A Bundesbank spokesman declined to comment on the reports, but evidence of recent discreet dollar selling emerges from the central bank's weekly return, which indicates that net reserves have fallen over the last three weeks, dealers said. Rumors that the Bundesbank and the U.S. Federal Reserve were intervening to sell dollars have repeatedly swept the market in recent weeks. Since the market can react sharply even to news that the Bundesbank is inquiring about prices, its approach to banks requires extreme discretion, dealers said. The said the central bank's recent moves were aimed mainly at reducing dollar holdings swollen by heavy intervention earlier this year and continually replenished by interest on its 75 billion to 80 billion DM ($40.7 million to $43.4

million) foreign currency reserves, which are mainly held in dollars. Dollar sales have two attractive side-effects for the Bundesbank, dealers noted. They would tend to brake the dollar's rise, in line with the February accord to stabilize currencies, and would restrain money supply growth by draw-ing Deutsche marks out of the market.

Sandoz Unit Fined For EC Violation

BRUSSELS — Sandoz Prodotti Farmaceutici SpA, the Italian sub-sidiary of the Swiss chemicals giant Sandoz, was ordered Tuesday to pay a fine of 800,000 European Currency Units ($900,000) for alleged violations of European Com nunity rules on competition. The EC Commission, the community's executive body, said that the company infringed the law by prohibiting its clients from export-in products and by frequently limiting shipments to what it considered "normal" needs of its cli-Such practices, the commission found, were calculated to restrict-free trade within the 12-nation EC. The company has the right to appeal the fine to the EC Court of

Germany Posts Surplus With EC

Agence France-Presse
FRANKFURT — West Gerinte ny's current account balance with the rest of the European Communi-ty was in surplus by 23 billion Deutsche marks ($12.5 billion) in 1986 after three years of deficits, the Bundesbank said in a report for release Wednesday. Current ac-count measures trade in merchandisc and services.

The West German central bank's report for July said the turnaround was due mainly to a fall in gasoline and natural gas prices. West Ger-many gets most of these products from Britain and the Netherlands. The country's current account surplus with Britain grew 72 percent from 1985 to 16.2 billion DM. U.S. Bus Firms Sign Merger Pact

DALLAS — Greyhound Lines Inc. and troubled Trailways Corp. have signed a previously an-nounced $80 million merger agree-ment, Greyhound's chairman, Fred NEW YORK - Cahners Publishing Co., a unit of Lon-don-based Reed International Currey, said Tuesday.

The merger, announced June 19, leaves the United States with a single inter-city bus company. The Justice Department initially raised reservations about the transaction, but Greyhound argued Trailways would collapse unless the merger proceeded rapidly.

Greyhound will offer employment to all Trailways drivers, three-quarters of the 640 maintenance workers and all salaried employees, with the exception of some executives, Mr. Currey said. On Aug. 5 the merged company will reduce scheduled miles by 41,600 (67,300 kilometers), or 5.1 percent. The company also plans to offer more discount fares, Mr. Currey said.

NEW YORK - The dollar closed above 1.85 Deutsche marks Incidely for the first time in six months as expectations grew for a marked improvement in the U.S. merchandise trade deficit.

The dollar ended in New York at 1.8530 DM, up more than a plennig from from 1.8425 Monday. It was the first time the dollar had closed above 1.8500 DM since

The dollar also closed at 151.255 Japanese yen, up from 151.075 Monday; at 1.5435 Swiss france, up from 1.5380; and at 6.1650 French francs, up from 6.1325.

It was also higher against the British pound, which closed at $1.6105, against $1.6155.

"Everything is pointed toward Wednesday's trade figures," said Joseph Volpicella, executive vice president of Spavo Financial Corp., a New York-based currency-trading firm.

Mr. Volpicella said that, according to market rumors, the trade deficit for May would be around $11.5 billion, much narrower than could set the tone for a better dollar the market was closed for a holithe $13.3 billion shortfall in April. for the duration of the summer."

Strong Buying of Foreign Bonds

Agence France-Presse

TOKYO - Japanese institutional investors continued to buy substantial numbers of foreign bonds in July because of the stabilization of exchange rates and U.S. interest rates, the financial daily Nihon Keizai Shimbun reported Tuesday.

Quoting financial sources, it said that net purchases of foreign bonds by Japanese inves-tors totaled $2.5 billion in the week to July 8, and are expected to reach $5 billion during the first half of July. If the market remains stable, net purchases will likely top $10 billion in July, compared with $14.1 billion in June, it said.

It said Japanese investment trust funds were buying U.S. national bonds, while non-life insurance companies were purchasing European currency-denominated bonds.

(Continued from first finance page) last month that the value of stock in such markets would grow to between $500 billion and $800 billion by the end of the century.

"A major educational process is A major educational process is under way," said Mark Mobius, president of the Templeton Emerg-ing Markets Fund, a $110 million vehicle launched in February. "International investors, particularly U.S. institutions and fund managers, are discovering these markets for the first time."

But there are problems that cloud a bright future and a newfound sense of confidence.

Chief among these is the dearth of quality stock available in most markets, a problem exacerbated by a tendency among powerful Asian investors to keep a large proportion of issued share capital out circula-

The narrow range of most Asian markets has made them especially difficult for foreigners, since overseas investors can trade only in stocks that are sufficiently capitalized to allow for block trading and easy entry and exit. Throughout the region, this has led to two-tier trading, in which price-to-earnings ratios of stocks available to foreign investors are far higher than market averages.

In Manila, for instance, there are only half a dozen stocks, according to most analysts, in which overseas fund managers would take an interest. In Kuala Lumpur there are twice that number, but they are trading at multiples up to four times higher than the market as a

In markets such as Singapore and Thailand, where there are limits on the percentage of a stock foreigners as a group can hold, premiums of 5 percent to 15 percent above the market price are commonly paid in off-market transac-

About 40 South Korean companies are expected to be listed this year, compared with 13 in 1986. "This isn't a very subtle exercise," said W. Todd Kilborn, senior analyst in Seoul for James Capel & Co. "Since there's nothing the authorities can do about demand, they are very concerned with improving

But the reluctance of local corporations to offer shares publicly is only part of the problem with Asia's small markets, many analysts and fund managers assert. More than anything else, they say, the underdevelopment of the markets reflects a longstanding lack of commitment from financia

For foreign investors, other problems arise in areas ranging from national accounting standards to foreign-exchange controls and international tax treaties.

Underlying official attitudes toward equity trading, many analysts suggest, is a deep distrust of free markets among government regulators in Asia. It is the same sense of caution, they add, that has prevented political freedoms from developing more rapidly.

"Current regulations tend to sti-fle activity," said Nik Mohamed Sidek, corporate finance manager at Arab-Malaysian Merchant Bank Bhd. in Kuala Lumpur. "We need a streamlined authority that not only regulates trading, but is aware of the need to develop it, too." If there is an exception to this pattern, it is in Scoul, the largest of Asia's junior markets. Since of ficial efforts to develop equity trading began in the early 1980s, a group of strong Korean brokers has emerged, along with local institu-tions and a number of locally managed mutual funds.

As in Taiwan, however, direct ownership of stock remains off himits to foreigners in South Korea. For the immediate future, both markets are likely to limit overseas investors to indirect holdings through funds.

In other markets, foreigners are devising new techniques to overcome the problems of underdevelopment. Several large U.S. securities houses have begun making their own markets in popular Singaporcan and Malaysian stocks, for instance, which can enhance liquidity significantly. To judge by statistics, Asian companies are slowly accepting the advantages of listing on the local exchange. Bangkok has half a dozen new listings in the pipeline, Kuala Lumpur almost as many. For many, the most compelling argument appears to be the health of the market itself. "Asian entrepreneurs are becom ing more accepting of equity fi-nancing," said Mr. Mobius, of Templeton. "They're learning that foreign investors are interested in a fair return, not in gaining management control.

Like other fund managers, Mr. Mobius believes the small size of Asia's emerging markets, and the prices they command, makes them vulnerable to a sudden drop in prices if sentiment changes among

As they mature, however, these exchanges are expected to resemble the Tokyo market, with its characteristic speculation and the importance placed on liquidity, more than New York or London.

THE UNICORN EXPEDITION: And Babu, Film Star," in which an unsuccessful Other Fantastic Tales of India

By Satyajit Ray. 190 pages. $16.95. E. P. Dutton, 2 Park Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10016.

Reviewed by John Gross

I MUST admit that I began "The Unicom Expedition" with a marked prejudice in its favor. There is no contemporary film director I. admire more than Satyajit Ray: coming from the man who made the Apr. trilogy, and a succession of equally notable movies, any collection of stories, even a disappointing one, could hardly fail to have its interest. And in the event, the stories in The Union Expedition. are thoroughly engaging; they would stand up perfectly well by themselves, even if we knew nothing of the author.

Although Ray says that he didn't have any bent for literature when he was young, he comes from a strongly liferary backgrou Both his father and grandfather were leading Indian children's writers; much of their work appeared in Sandesh, a monthly magazine for children — Sandesh is the name of a popular Bengah sweetmeat — founded by his grandfa-ther in 1913 and published by the family print-

Sandesh was closed down not long after his father's death, but in 1961 Ray and a friend decided to start it up again. For the first resurrected issue he produced a Bengali version of Edward Lear's poem "The Jumbles"; since then lie has been a regular contributor to the magazine, and the stories in "The Unicom Expedition" first appeared in its pages.

Often they involve animals. A skeptic stones to death the cobra that a holy man claims to have tamed, and then finds himself undergoing have tamed, and then finds himself undergoing-a metamorphosis no less drastic (though rather more condign) than Gregor Samsa's in the story by Kafica. A pet dog starts langhing— though only when something really famy hap-pens; a pet bird of no known species develops into a monster. And human beings can be equally disconcerting. A middle aged holiday-maker encounters his double, and gradually feels overwhelmed by the urge to kill him.

The only story in the book that dispen with supernatural props completely is "Patol middle aged jack of all-trades, who had once had dreams of being an actor, is given a part in a movie; it turns out to consist of a single line, or rather a single word — "Oh!" Here inevitably, we think of Satyajit Ray. Here inevitably, we think of Satyajit Ray. filmmaker, the other stories, by contrast, represent an entertaining diversion from his major artistic efforts. But they do at any rate remand us that the quality with which he first made his

ISTANBUL — Prices on the Istanbul StockExchange, revived 18 months ago by the Turkish government after 60 years in limbo, have risen sharply this month, brokers said Tuesday.

The index surged to a record 762.28 points in the second week of July, a gain of 315 since the end of June. Brokers cited strong demand for the limited number of traded sharps.

Pitino Fills a Cavity in New York

NEW YORK - The search for Judge Crater has been longer, the hunt for Dr. Livingstone more dan-gerous and the pursuit of the perfect martini more thirst-quenching. But the exhausting, frustrating 84-day quest for a head coach for the New York Knicks finally came to an end. When the National Basketball Association team found its man, he "Had a cavity - right molar," Rick Pitino explained later. "The dentist was about to drill when the phone rang. My wife was calling and was passing along a message that the Knicks wanted to talk to me right away." Pitino leaped from the chair. "Wouldn't you," he said, Fif you had a chance to get out of having a tooth drilled?"

 That evening he met for several hours with the team's brass at a hotel near Pitino's basketball camp in Massachusetts. On Thursday morning, he was offered the job. "I was caught off-guard, to say the least," said Pitino. "I didn't expect any of this to happen, not after Soccer has neither the means nor the will to flush out agents and parasites whose riches and rakeoffs burgeon through the ever-spinning transfer whirl. Sign today, haggle tomorrow and find the highest bidder by weekend.

The soccer world is upside down. Not long ago, players were seris told where to play, for whom and for how much. Now the precious few are playing off one potential employer against another, squeez ing and squeezing until the pips

And perhaps the wages of superstardom did grate against others, with more modest rewards, in a team game. Besides, trophies are an annual affair at Liverpool; Newcastle has won just one in Beardslev's lifetime.

But when the clubs agreed to the £1.9 million fee, a British record, Beardsley — and his agent — demanded a cut of the profit.

They pointed out that, when signing his Newcastle contract, Beardsley had inserted a clause stipulating that should he move to a foreign club the fee could not exceed £1.5 million (leaving room for Beardsley to "negotiate" Liverpool was paying £400,000 more than that. Beardsley would

Newcastle says there has been no "loyalty" payoff. It now has money to build new stands, but is the day coming when fans (and sponsors) will withhold their loyalties, will set their lantern jaws and disappear like fly-by-night heroes?

Assault on Ignorance

By Russell Baker

N EW YORK — We are in the midst of another assault on dumbness. This one was ignited by do you know about the recent survey of California college students?

bunch was born. Imagine a head-line: "Pilot Drops A-Bomb on Rio de Janeiro by Mistake; 'Always Thought Japan Was Down There Someplace Below Biloxi,' He Says."

Geography, literature, history you name it and kids by the million go slack in the jaw. High schools swarm with people who don't know there was a World War I. UCLA has a student who thinks Toronto is in Italy. Half of the United States's adolescents never heard of Stalin.

These statistics and plenty more people who fear that American noness is getting out of hand. Books saying we have become a nation of dolts enjoy surprisingly brisk sales, and journals published for the literate dwell with deepening melancholy on the theme that galloping ignorance threatens to make an end of us. The last big attack on national ignorance was set off by Sputnik, which scared people. They thought the Russians were beating us in a vital technology competition. The fear now is that we are losing to other countries in a mercantile

It is easy to slide away from the heart of the matter by blaming the educators, but the awkward fact is you're telling. Don't waste our time that Americans have always been of two minds about ignorance and recently we have rather favored it. Note Ronald Reagan: no president since Harding has been more ignorant of his own government, yet his popularity polls have been consistently higher than any president's since Eisenhower. Eisenhower, perhaps not incidentally, was suspected of being a bit dim himself. We now know better, but the misconception didn't hurt his popularity any. In the 1950s, Ike's decade, oafishness was widely respected by Americans

gence was regarded with suspicion or contempt.

Adlai Stevenson, the thinking man as politician, was an "eggevidence of amazing ignorance head," an amusingly abusive synamong young people. For instance, onym for "intellectual." > The pendulum swang back in the early 1960s when John Kennedy put the lively mind back into good repute, but dumbness was soon triiphant again as passions created by the Vietnam War produced the victory of the know-nothings on the campuses. Ignorance was rehabilitated as a form of sociological uplift and gussied up under a new name, "Relevance."

If it wasn't "relevant," why did anyone need to know it? So we have in the American character this powerful tendency to like them are now widely cited by find ignorance fetching. You find it in the primitive blockheads like those who led the Red hunts of the 1950s and in the newfangled, highbrow boobs who did away with irrelevant learning in the 1960s.

> It is always threatening to flare up. "So you admit to this committee that you know where Japan is located, eh? Did they teach you that in Moscow?"

Or: "You stand there with your flabby, dishonest, hypocritical, middle-class-ethos face sneering at this audience and tell us we can't get to Japan by going south from Biloxi, and you think you're telling us something worth telling? You're telling irrelevancy, that's what telling us how to find Japan. Tell us how to find justice and peace and love and spiritual fulfillment."

Both these phases are modern variants of the primordial American cal congratulating himself on his ignorance by saying, "A little learning is a dangerous thing." This fellow dates from the time when American resources were so plentiful that with a little luck and no scruple against bloodshed, even an oramus could amass the wealth

The Unflinching Eye of a Photojournalist

By Vicki Goldberg
AST winter Mary Ellen Mark turned her fascination with autism into an assignment. At the Mothering Center in Greenwich, Connecticut, she stood among the mothers and children, photographing a therapy session. The small room seemed to swell up with struggle and shouts - women and children everywhere, hugging, kissing, clutching, crying out. Many of the children do not talk; they sulk, they wail and ding, they turn their eyes away and do not answer. "Lizz!" one woman cried, holding her daughter down, "Damn it, Liza, I'm mad at you! If you feel so bad, think how I feel! Rejected by you every day! Liza, I want! I want!"

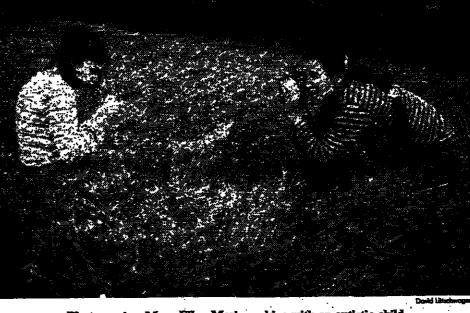

Mark photographed everyone while she gauged which children were most interesting. "I relate to people who have more spunk, are more open," she said. "They're better with the camera." After some time, she whispered: "You know what would be really interesting?" Her face widened with a great smile of excitement. "To come two or three more times and then pick out a couple of people to follow at home. Liza, maybe

She had caught a whiff of potential drama and was beginning to recognize the story's shape: one child remote, one loving, one pained Later Mark would give up on Alex, thinking him "too good," too conscious of the cam-era. "You have a sense of what you want to say about something after a few days," she says. "You have to have your opinion. It may be wrong but you have to have

Whenever she picks up a camera, Mark, 47, puts herself in an emotional no-man's-land. She claims that she doesn't take risks "War photographers do that" yet hers is the archetypal saga of the photojournalist who conquers obstacles and emotional shock to bring back accounts of unexplored territory: hospices for the dying, brothels in India, camps for children with cancer.

She brings to all her photographs an unflinching yet compassionate eye. In the midst of exotica or on the fringes of society, where she often chooses to be, she does not exaggerate the una few women grew curious. One key to her success as a photoiour-

avoidably alien, freakish qualities a less complex photographer would emphasize, but tries to find chies to what is familiar and human. Thus a picture of three Indian prostitutes solemnly, uncomfortably awaiting a man's zision becomes a poignant, harsher version of young girls at a dance. Mark says that "Falkland Road," her 1981 book on the Bombay brothels "was meant almost as a metaphor for entrapment, for how difficult it is to be a

Her subject matter raises an old question about photojournalism: Do photographers exploit those less fortunate than themselves for the sake of their art? Mark herself simply asks whether the poor should be ignored; many have eagerly posed for her, she says, pre-cisely because they wished to be noticed at last.

Richard B. Stolley, who as managing editor of Life magazine assigned to Mark many of her most important stories, refers to her as "one of the top three or four in the world" and adds, "She is probably the best — how can I put this without sounding sexist? I don't know of another woman photojournalist as good as she

Gifted with an eccentric visual imagination, she likes unlikely angles, perilons balances and large, empty spaces in which an isolated figure carries the emotional charge of an exclamation mark. After taking a bachelor-of-fine-arts degree in painting and art history and deciding she wasn't good enough to be a painter, Mark took a master-of-arts de gree in photojournalism at the University of Pennsylvania's Anneaberg School of Communications, having chosen photography almost at random and fallen in love with the camera the moment she held one in her hand.

"From the very first night, that was it," she says. "It was weird. I became obsessed by it. I knew immediately it would be my life's work. I knew I had a chance of being good at it."

Her deep commitment to stories about people on the edge only began in 1976, on Ward 81. "For "Passport," portraits from years I'd planned to live in a mental hospital," she says. "I wanted to see if I could feel something of what it was like to be set aside from society." No one was willing to fund such a project, so she traveled to the Oregon State Hospital at her own expense to live for 36 days in the state's only locked ward for women. "I think I was interested because my father had several nervous breakdowns and was hospitalized several times." she says. "But beyond that, in third grade we took a class trip to a mental hospital. I never forgot that. It was fascinating to me. Had I ever had a scientific mind I would have loved being a psychia-

She never photographs anyone who refuses ("I'm too shy"), and she claims to be equally good at sensing when she can shoot and when she should not Recently she was photographing Robert, an autistic child, when the boy's eyes suddenly rolled up and his arms flailed like malfunctioning machinery: an epileptic seizure. "I didn't shoot," says Mark. "It was very dramatic, but I just couldn't. I felt terrible for the mother and grandmother, and for the boy too. He knew I was there, and he didn't like it. If anything

Yet she steels herself to take pictures when that seems almost impossible. "Somehow in Ethiopia I thought, 'How can I live with myself? People are dying.' But you feel you have to do it. I think that's the compensation for your-self: I'm recording an event that's important, an event that people should see. We tell ourselves that ail the time. There's something meless about me. And I think all documentary photographess that actually do come back with those pictures — there's some-thing shameless about all of us. "This kind of work, sometimes it's a disease that gets into the blood. The drive is stronger than I am. Fortunately or unfortunately, I suppose I'm connected to my camera for the rest of my life."

U.S. Tax Collectors Seize Girl's Piggybank Savings The Internal Revenue Service

has seized a 9-year-old girl's piggy. bank savings to pay her grandfa-ther's back taxes, relatives say. The IRS notified the family of Carmin Fisher in Junction City, Oklahoma, that the agency had ordered a bank to turn over $70.76 the fourth-grader had deposited in an account in her and her grandmother's names. She had collected pennies from her grandparents and other family members, along with pennies she, found on the street or earned from returning bottles and cans. "That's more than 7,000 permies, many years savings for a little girl, her grandfather, Charles Fisher, said Monday. Fisher said he owes back taxes, but he said the government had no right to take away the savings his granddaughter had been dropping into a piggybank made out of a coffee can since she was 2 years old. Steve Matthews, an IRS spokesman, said it is not the government's policy to take money from people who do not owe the debt. He suggested the Fishers call the IRS and explain what happened. The girl's grandmother, Bettye Fisher, said she tried that but she was put on bold, then was told to submit a standard complaint form.

Bette Midler will appeal the dis-missal of her $10 million lawsuit against Ford Motor Co. for using a voice that sounded similar to hers in a commercial, her lawyer says. U.S. District Judge Ferdinand F. Ferumdez ruled in favor of Ford on Monday as well as Young and Rubicam, the agency that produced the ad.
